

POILLONS STILL UNSENTENCED

CHARLOTTE, HOWEVER, FOUND GUILTY OF AN OLD ASSAULT.

Taken to Special Sessions, to Supreme Court, Then Back to Special Sessions, Then Remanded Until Wednesday—Contents of the Trunks Left at Hotels.

The Poillon sisters were arraigned in Special Sessions again yesterday to be sentenced for defrauding the Hotel Bristol out of $38.10, but they again escaped sentence. Sister Charlotte, however, was found guilty of assaulting Thomas Dumps, an elevator boy, in a hotel in Twenty-seventh street on March 6, 1902. This case had been pending for some time.

When the sisters were arraigned before Justices Mayo, Zeller and Olmsted, Meyer Greenberg announced that he had secured a writ of habeas corpus from Justice Platzek. Justice Olmsted threw it back as soon as he saw that it was directed to Warden Flynn.

"The writ is not addressed to this court," he said.

"That is true, but I served it on Warden Flynn this morning and he told me the Poillon sisters had already been sent over to the Court of Special Sessions," explained Greenberg.

The Justices then said that as it was not directed to the court they were ready to impose sentence. Greenberg expostulated and declared that he had come into possession of some newly discovered evidence. Justice Zeller reminded Mr. Greenberg that the only evidence which could be used was in regard to the case at bar.

"We have in writing several papers to prove that a certain man promised to pay the hotel bills of my clients," Greenberg continued.

How are you going to disprove the claims of your clients that other persons had agreed to pay their bills? asked Justice Olmsted.

The lawyer said he would get over that difficulty, and then a man, a probation officer, was called to the stand. Mrs. Axman said that the hotel bills she had found unpaid besides the one at the Bristol were: a bill at the St. Francis for $21.10, at the Albany for $18.75, one at the King Edward for $28.90 and one at the Grenville for $18.27. It was also testified that on November 19, 1902, the sisters were convicted of disorderly conduct and fined $10 each for knocking out a lawyer's clerk in City Hall Park.

Mrs. Axman then was excused and Justice Zeller said that he had decided to remand Charlotte guilty of the assault charged. This brought fresh protest from Greenberg, but his objection was overruled.

Testimony that was listened to with interest was given by Probation Officer Greenberg. It dealt with articles found in trunks left by the sisters in various hotels. A small trunk left at the Grenville contained an old undershirt, a teaspoon bearing the name of an all night restaurant and a few napkins from which the names of the hotels had been cut.

A trunk left at the King Edward Hotel, said the witness, contained fifteen books of racing sheets, a white sock, a pair of corsets, a towel marked Hotel Belmont, a bath towel of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, a bath towel of the Lexington Hotel, and among Charlotte's paraphernalia photographs of ring celebrities whom Charlotte had sparred with. There were some punching bags also. Graveyard said that the ring celebrity pictures were those of Jim Corbett and Mike McFadden. In the picture he said Sister Charlotte was dressed in tights.

Justice Mayo said after Graveyard's testimony that the court had decided to remand the prisoners to Warden Flynn to be taken before Justice Platzek. Assistant District Attorney Johnston appeared for the District Attorney at the hearing on the writ of habeas corpus before Justice Platzek in the Supreme Court. Mr. Taylor said the only object for which the writ could have been asked was to impede the proceedings of the Court of Special Sessions.

Greenberg said he objected to the action of the Special Sessions court in finding Charlotte Poillon guilty of a charge of assault tried by the court of Special Sessions. His main point was that there was nothing in law or the Penal Code which sets forth anything about defrauding hotels. In section 82 of the Criminal Code, the section applicable to the case and upon which the move was made against the Poillons, he argued, there was nothing about defrauding hotels. Assistant District Attorney Johnston said that the head note of section 382 was "Frauds on Hotel Keepers."

Justice Platzek asked for the original petition, the affidavit on which it was based and the reply of the District Attorney. After examining them he said:

"On the papers before me I dismiss the writ, and the prisoners are remanded to the Court of Special Sessions."

The sisters were then taken back to court for sentence. When they arrived, however, Justice Zeller told the sisters that they were being taken by Justice Wyatt, and on Lawyer Greenberg's objection to sentence being imposed without the original bench the prisoners were remanded to their cell yesterday, when Justice Zeller will be back.

TWO BURGLARIES, NO SPOILS

INTRUDERS SCARED OFF IN EACH CASE WHILE AT WORK.

Cut Telephone Wire in West Ninety-second Street Homes and Make Getaway Before Police Can Be Summoned—Cop. Mistaken for One of Them, Faces Pistol.

Two houses in West Ninety-second street near Central Park West were entered by burglars early yesterday morning, but the intruders were detected while they were at work and were scared away without getting any booty. The crooks' invasion caused a heap of excitement, and few persons who knew of it went back to work until daylight. Those who did took care to have loaded revolvers under their pillows.

Robert Smith, a wealthy costumer, lives with his wife and two sons and two daughters at 32 West Ninety-second street. He was sleeping in a room in the rear of the library on the second floor when at 3 o'clock in the morning he awoke because of being cold. An electric light that burns in the hall all night had been turned out. This aroused Mr. Smith's suspicions, and he got out of bed. In the library, the door of which was open, he saw a light reflected in a mirror and seizing his revolver he rushed in. The burglar, who was ransacking the library, shut off the light of his pocket lamp, fled down the stairs and darted out through the front door. A confederate who was packing up plunder in the drawing room downstairs followed his pal and both got away.

Mr. Smith's cries aroused the household, and his two sons came out of their bedrooms armed with revolvers. They tried to telephone to Police Headquarters, but the burglars had cut the wires, and it was not until a neighbor next door was aroused and asked to summon the police that Headquarters was notified. In the meantime the crooks had made a good getaway.

The burglars had entered the house through the rear. They got into the yard from an alley that runs through from Ninety-second street, and mounting the stairs they entered the library. They tried to telephone to Police Headquarters, but the burglars had cut the wires, and it was not until a neighbor next door was aroused and asked to summon the police that Headquarters was notified. In the meantime the crooks had made a good getaway.

MERIDEN BRITA CO. SOLD BY LEADING DEALERS. "Silver Plate that Wears."

COURT REBUKES HENRY W. A. PAGE

Says He Improperly Had His Wife Confined in an Asylum.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court affirmed yesterday the judgment granting to Jeanie France Page a separation from Henry W. A. Page, with the custody of their three children and alimony of $333 a month.

Page had his wife committed to a sanitarium on the plea that she was unduly addicted to the use of drugs and liquors. On the trial it was shown that she was not in the habit of using drugs or liquors to excess and that he had systematically ill treated and abused her.

Justice Ingraham, for the Appellate Division, says that the judgment of separation was thoroughly warranted by the evidence and that Page's treatment of his wife should receive severe condemnation. He adds:

"The case illustrates the care that must be taken by judicial officers when it is sought to procure the incarceration of a person in these institutions to see to it that the persons to be deprived of their liberty have an opportunity of being heard, except where there really exists a substantial objection to the giving of the notice required by the statute."

"This whole case shows that the plaintiff has been a devoted mother and a good wife. In the library, the door of which was open, he saw a light reflected in a mirror and seizing his revolver he rushed in. The burglar, who was ransacking the library, shut off the light of his pocket lamp, fled down the stairs and darted out through the front door. A confederate who was packing up plunder in the drawing room downstairs followed his pal and both got away."

The court also affirms the extra allowance of $1,200 for counsel fees to Mrs. Page.

FALSE MARRIAGE CERTIFICATES.

Notary Charged With Filing One and Says There Are Others.

Enid Carow, a notary of 308 East Eighty-eighth street, was held in $300 bail by Magistrate Droeg in the Tombs police court yesterday charged with filing a false certificate of marriage. This is the first arrest for violation of the marriage license law, which went into effect on January 1st.

It is charged that on last Thursday Carow filed a paper in the marriage license bureau in City Hall purporting to be a marriage contract made under the old domestic relation law, superseding the new law on January 1st. The paper was dated December 18, 1902, and named George Suttner of 411 East 147th street and Emily Johnson of 232 East 117th street as the parties to the contract.

The witnesses were Henrietta Carow, the notary's wife, and Carl Lange. Deputy City Clerk Gifford in examining the paper noticed that the pair had secured a marriage license required under the new law and had turned it over to Carow, who gave them one of his own making after marrying them for a few days.

He declared that after putting the matter up to Carow the prisoner gave him the names of a number of other notaries who, he alleged, were violating the marriage license law.

Mr. Krotel subpoenaed all the persons whose names were mentioned in connection with the matter and announced that he had learned from them that Suttner and Miss Johnson were married by Carow on February 17 of this year under the old marriage law and not on December 18, 1902, as alleged in the paper.

The Assistant District Attorney further announced that the pair had secured a marriage license required under the new law and had turned it over to Carow, who gave them one of his own making after marrying them for a few days.

He declared that after putting the matter up to Carow the prisoner gave him the names of a number of other notaries who, he alleged, were violating the marriage license law.

After the maid had told her mistress that she had slapped her face the Court remarked that the lady of the house must have had some reason for administering the slapping, and he asked Mrs. Cohn to tell all about it.

"I admit that I did slap the girl's face," said Mrs. Cohn. "I instructed her to do it the parlor and some time later I noticed that she had not done so, I questioned her and she declared that she had dashed. I told her I did not believe her and then she called me a liar. I thought she was going far even for a maid, so I slapped her face."

"You did what was right and should have gone further and kicked the maid," said the Court to the mistress. Then he told the maid to go home and learn some manners and how to address her employer. The complaint against Mrs. Cohn was dismissed.

"How many?" asked Justice Dowling. "About a thousand."
